Update on the Diamond Princess Cruise Ship in Japan

We commend the extraordinary efforts by the Government of Japan to institute quarantine measures on-board the Diamond Princess. While the quarantine potentially conferred a significant public health benefit in slowing transmission, CDC's assessment is that it may not have been sufficient to prevent transmission among individuals on the ship. CDC believes the rate of new reports of positives new on board, especially among those without symptoms, highlights the high burden of infection on the ship and the potential for ongoing risk. Therefore, to protect the health of the American public, all passengers and crew of the ship have been placed under travel restrictions, preventing them from returning to the United States for at least 14 days after they had left the Diamond Princess.

Currently, there are more than 100 U.S. citizens still onboard the Diamond Princess cruise ship or in hospitals in Japan. These citizens have been placed under the restrictions, as have the ship's other passengers and crew.

After disembarkation from the Diamond Princess, these passengers and crew will be required to wait 14 days without having symptoms or a positive coronavirus test result before they are permitted to board flights to the United States.

If an individual from this cruise arrives in the United States before the 14-day period ends, they will still be subject to a mandatory quarantine until they have completed the 14-day period with no symptoms or positive coronavirus test results.

Because of their high-risk exposure, CDC expects there will be additional confirmed cases of COVID-19 among the remaining passengers on board the Diamond Princess.

CDC is committed to protecting the health and safety of all Americans. We continue to believe that the risk of exposure to COVID-19 to the general public in the United States is currently low. The U.S. Government is taking these measures to protect the Diamond Princess passengers and crew, their loved ones, the traveling public, and communities within the United States.

Sentencing is set for June 16, 2020, at 2:00p.m., in United States District Court at Knoxville. Terry Lee Gilbreath faces a sentence of 15 to 30 years in prison, a lifetime of supervision and placement on the sex offender registry.

The evidence presented at trial proved the defendant befriended an eight-year-old girl at a yard sale, drove her home, and immediately inserted himself into the lives of her vulnerable family. The proof further showed that within a month, the defendant videoed and photographed his sexual molestation of the eight-year-old child.

“Cases such as this offend the sensibilities of all decent persons. The perpetrators are reprehensible for their victimization of vulnerable and innocent children,” said United States Attorney J. Douglas Overbey. “Those who use and abuse our children for pornographic purposes and the gratification of their sexual perversions will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law and deserve the harshest of punishments.

Law enforcement agencies taking part in the joint investigation which led to indictment and subsequent conviction of Terry Lee Gilbreath included Homeland Security Investigations (HSI), Knoxville Police Department Internet Crimes Against Children Unit, Madisonville Police Department and Monroe County Sheriff’s office.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jennifer Kolman represented the United States.

into the illegal harvesting, trafficking, and smuggling of American Ginseng.

As part of his plea agreement, Mr. Turner agreed to pay restitution to the State of Tennessee and perform 100 hours of community service. Sentencing is set for June 11, 2020, at 1:15 p.m., and Mr. Turner faces a maximum term of imprisonment of up to 15 years.

American Ginseng (Panax quinquefolius), is a slow-growing perennial species of plant found throughout the Northeast, Midwest, and Appalachian regions of the United States. Wild American Ginseng has substantial commercial value because there is a national and international market for its use as an ingredient in food, drinks, and traditional medicines. American Ginseng is protected under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora of 1973 (CITES) and the Endangered Species Act (ESA). The purpose of CITES is to monitor, control, and restrict, as necessary, the international trade of certain wild plant and animal species in an effort to prevent adverse impacts and ensure continued existence of those species in their natural habitat.

In Tennessee, the Tennessee Department of Environmental Conservation (TDEC) has responsibilities, under CITES, the ESA, and state law, to regulate and monitor the commercial harvest of wild American Ginseng and to ensure that populations are not imperiled.

Accordingly, American Ginseng dealers are required to routinely submit paperwork to TDEC to document their ginseng purchases. Mr. Turner admitted to falsifying several of those documents in 2015 after purchasing American Ginseng before the opening of the established season for harvest-
