Tennessee General Assembly Passes $39.45 Billion Budget

On June 19th the Tennessee House of Representatives and Senate approved a $39.45 billion budget that addresses the unexpected revenue shortfalls caused by the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic in Tennessee.

The Fiscal Year (FY) 2020-21 budget reduces the size of government through commonsense reductions and cuts totaling $1.5 billion over a two-year period in efforts to address historic revenue losses. The budget also finalizes the elimination of the Hall Income Tax, and it does not raise taxes on Tennesseans.

The new state spending plan invests $350 million into Tennessee's savings account, also called the Rainy

Day Fund, totaling $1.45 billion. The budget also fully funds the Basic Education Program (BEP), covering both growth and inflation with a $50.3 million investment. It includes $10.6 million for health insurance and retirement for teachers and principals. The FY 20-21 budget supports higher education with a $50 million investment in new facilities.

The FY 20-21 budget focuses on boosting consumer and business confidence through the creation of a $25 million sales tax holiday which will take place over two weekends in late July and early August 2020.

Other key allocations include a $210 million grant program for all Tennessee cities and counties. These funds have no restrictions and will be used to address unique needs that are best determined by local and county leaders. Approximately $15 million will be used to support economic and community development through broadband accessibility grants.

Finally, the FY 20-21 budget invests $19 million to strengthen the state's health care safety network and $7.5 million in new funding to create a children's behavioral safety network.

Tennessee's new state budget supports citizens across all three grand divisions of our state as they continue to recover from these extraordinary circumstances. Conservative leadership has made the Volunteer State the best place in the entire nation to live, work, raise a family, and retire.

Tennessee Lawmakers Pass Historic Pro-life Legislation New Law Bans Abortion When Fetal Heartbeat De-

Tennessee lawmakers passed historic, groundbreaking pro-life legislation that protects life by banning abortion procedures when a fetal heartbeat is detected after six weeks. Known as the "Heartbeat Bill," the measure was part of Governor Bill Lee's legislative agenda and is among the most comprehensive, pro-life legislation in the country.

House Bill 2263/Senate Bill 2196 passed by a 68-17 vote in the House on June 18. The legislation includes a ladder provision that enacts bans at various other gestation intervals up to twenty-four weeks. These provisions would take effect if the courts struck down the six-week ban or any other component of this measure.

The new law requires women seeking abortions to be informed of fetal development through ultrasound images. It bans abortion when a doctor knows a woman is seeking the procedure because of a child's race, sex, or a diagnosis of Down syndrome.

An amendment added to the bill in the Senate chamber mirrors legislation sponsored by House Republican Caucus Chairman Jeremy Faison, R-Cosby, which previously passed in the House chamber. The amendment requires facilities where more than fifty abortions are performed in a year to post a sign letting women know they have the option to reverse a chemical abortion. Failing to make women aware of this option could result in a $10,000 fine.

Tennessee is a strong pro-life state. This historic measure demonstrates Tennessee Lawmaker's unwavering commitment to fight for the unborn.

House Bill 2263/Senate Bill 2196 heads to the governor's desk for approval.

Lowell Russell represents House District 21. He is the vice-chair of the Calendar & Rules Committee. He also serves on the Transportation Committee, Consumer & Human Resources Committee, Consumer Subcommittee, Safety & Funding Subcommittee, and serves as a House Majority Deputy Whip.
