CDC Reports Increase in Human Rabies Cases Linked to Bats in the U.S.

Three U.S. rabies deaths in just five weeks

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is raising awareness of the risks of rabies from bats in the U.S. after three people, including one child, died from rabies between late September and early November 2021. The three cases, described in the January 6, 2022, Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, bring the total number of cases in 2021 to five, compared to no reported rabies cases in people during 2019 and 2020.

Over a five-week period between September 28, and November 3, 2021, three people— one each in Idaho, Illinois, and Texas— were confirmed to have rabies after direct contact with bats in or around their homes and died. Two of the bat-associated cases were considered avoidable exposures: one was attributed to a bat roost in the patient's home, the other to the patient picking up the bat with bare hands. Two patients released the bat, rather than capturing it for testing. None of the three individuals received post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP), shots that can prevent rabies from developing if received before symptoms start.

"We have come a long way in the United States towards reducing the number of people who become infected each year with rabies, but this recent spate of cases is a sobering reminder that contact with bats poses a real health risk," said Ryan Wallace, DVM, MPH, a veterinarian and rabies expert in CDC's Division of High-Consequence Pathogens and Pathology.

Exposure to rabid bats is the leading cause of rabies in humans in the U.S., accounting for 70% of people who become infected. The number of rabid bats reported to the National Rabies Surveillance System has been stable since 2007, which suggests that this uptick in cases of rabies in people may be due to a lack of awareness about the risks of rabies – and that getting PEP is a life-or-death matter.

Bat bites do not always cause a visible mark yet can still spread rabies virus through infected saliva – so any direct contact with a bat should be assessed by a clinical or public health provider. It typically takes anywhere between three weeks to three months, though sometimes more or less time, for people to develop symptoms if infected. PEP is effective in preventing rabies until symptoms develop. Once symptoms begin, rabies is nearly always fatal.

CDC is urging people to take the following measures to prevent or lessen the risk of infection with rabies:

Avoid direct contact with bats.

If you do come into contact with a bat OR if someone possibly had contact with a bat, do the following:

Call your state or local health department or animal control to help trap the bat for testing or safely trap the bat yourself. Testing a bat to determine if it is rabid can help to determine whether you need PEP.

Contact your doctor or a local public health official to assess whether PEP is needed.

These steps are important even if contact with a bat takes place through clothing and bite or scratch marks are not visible. Sometimes it is not clear whether someone may have had contact with a bat, such as when a bat is found in a room with someone who is sleeping or where a child has been left unattended.

If potentially exposed to a rabid animal, receiving PEP soon after exposure and before symptoms begin is critical. While rabies deaths in people in the United States are not common, CDC estimates that approximately 60,000 people receive PEP each year to prevent becoming ill with rabies. PEP is nearly 100% effective at preventing rabies if received before symptoms start.

Resisting

Jennifer Rhines, 47, Myrtle Ward Road Loudon, was charged with Public Intoxication, Resisting Arrest, Assault, and Disorderly Conduct.

Deputy Bengel LCSO, responded to W Lee Hwy to back up Deputy Stanley on a Domestic. While on scene Deputy made contact with the Offender/Jennifer Rhines. Rhines, who was heavily intoxicated and later admitted to drinking and taking medications, was on the porch/front yard and became aggressive and disorderly multiple times. Rhines would scream, curse and was causing a disruption that was hindering the investigation in the domestic. No primary aggressor could be determined and Rhines called her mother to come pick her up so both parties could be separated. When Rhines' mother pulled up, Deputy went to speak to her about the situation. Rhines became irate, got into her mother's face and began to curse at her. Rhines was warned again about being disorderly, to finish gathering her belongings and to get into her mother's car so they could leave. As Rhines stumbled back into the residence, she continued to scream, curse and flip her mother and Deputy off. Rhines came back outside of the house and would not calm down, she continued to curse and scream and cause a disruption in public. Deputy told Rhines that she was under arrest and to put her hands behind her back. Rhines resisted and after a brief struggle she was taken into custody. While Deputy escorted Rhines to his patrol car for transport, she kicked Deputy and tried tripping him. Deputy leg swept Rhines and took her to the ground until control of her was gained. Rhines was secured into his patrol car and transported to the Loudon County Jail where Priority EMS treated her for a minor cut on her face. Rhines is being charged with Public Intoxication, Disorderly Conduct, Resisting Arrest and Assault. Said events did occur in Loudon County, TN.

any longer. Your mind is like a sponge, thirsty to soak up any new knowledge or practice about the healing arts. You might spend today browsing a New Age bookstore. Or why not spend a relaxing hour lying flat out on a table, learning from the skilled fingers of a master masseuse?

Aquarius 1/20-2/18

Once begun is half done, as the saying goes. This certainly applies to you today, Aquarius. Yes, it's true that you have a considerable amount of work ahead of you, but surely you know that you can get it done. Trite as it may sound, making a list (no, you don't have to check it twice) will help you break the projects down into manageable chunks. It's so much easier to focus only on the next step rather than the entire Herculean task.

Pisces 2/19-3/20

How annoying when work gets in the way of pleasure, but there are times when professional opportunities are simply too good to pass up. That beguiling creature you've had your eye on will just have to wait for you another day. For now, Pisces, focus on the business at hand. With the current aspect at play, the payoff could be tremendous!

Aries 3/21-4/19

One disadvantage of attics is that so much junk tends to get stored up there. Today is the day for you to clean house. You've been putting this off long enough and now must face the dust and debris in your own personal attic. Whether it's emotional messes that need cleaning up or business matters that beg for attention, know that you will be hurting yourself and your future prospects if you delay any longer.

Taurus 4/20-5/20

It seems your ship is about to come in, Taurus. At least, the planets seem to think so. Your years of cultivating business relationships will pay off in the form of increased sales or new business opportunities. It seems this success spills over into your personal life as well. Life on the home front has never been more serene. You are the conductor of this melodious symphony that is your life. Congratulations!

Gemini 5/21-6/20

Why does being patient have to take so long? quipped one frustrated soul. Could it have been you, Gemini? Waiting has never been your strong suit, there's no question about it. You will get through today more easily if you concentrate on finding an outlet for your pent-up frustration. A visit to the gym or a vigorous cleaning of the house would help.

Cancer 6/21-7/22

We all know the adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." But you can't help feeling that you have tried and tried and tried to no avail. All that is about to change, Cancer, as you begin to reap the fruits of your labors. You can expect to see things from a new, unusual perspective. This will allow you to sidestep the obstacles that have been blocking you recently. Pay extra attention today and make a mental note, if not a physical one, of any unusual ideas you have.

Leo 7/23-8/22

Whatever you want, Leo, you need only ask for it and there is a good chance you will get it. And it's about time, too. It seems you have been working exceptionally hard lately. You are certainly due for a raise, if not a promotion. Gather your thoughts, collect your supporting evidence, and ask for what you deserve. If your yen for more public recognition is nagging at you, then take steps today to ensure that you get more time in the spotlight.

Virgo 8/23-9/22

It's time once and for all to tie up all those loose ends of projects left undone. Much as you may dread it, think of it this way, Virgo: by completing these tasks you clear space for exciting new projects to come your way. Know that everything bodes well today for all things financial and professional. Perhaps you'll get that bonus that's due you!

Libra 9/23-10/22

Junk mail and a few telephone solicitations would almost be a welcome relief from the intense communications you've been having with people lately. All this intensity is interesting, to be sure, but also more time consuming than you'd like. You barely have time to handle your own affairs, much less those of others. If you begin to feel yourself at the bursting point, call your own personal time-out. A shower or bath would do you a world of good, Libra.

Scorpio 10/23-11/21

It isn't nearly as bad as you think, Scorpio. In fact, things are definitely looking up. Of course, you'll never know that if you refuse to drag yourself out of bed to see for yourself. Your hard work of the last few months has left you enervated and somewhat drained. But today you begin to see the payoff! It's time to get up, get dressed, and dazzle the world with your brilliance. You know you can do it.

Sagittarius

11/22-12/21

Think of yourself as a marathon runner. You have a very long distance to travel, but the sweetness is not just to be found in crossing the finish line, but rather in relishing all the sights along the way. While your head today is overflowing with plans and ideas, you begin to feel deflated when you begin to consider all the logistics of realizing these dreams. Fret not, Sagittarius. The planets have blessed you with an energy level that is equal to the task, so go ahead and get started!
