The leader of a small town credit union brazenly stole from the bank, causing the demise of a credit union founded by her own grandparents decades ago.

Stacey Shaw opened six unauthorized credit cards in her name and repeatedly raised the credit limits on the cards over a period of three years. Since she had access to the credit card database, she was also able to set the interest rates and the monthly payments on the cards. In total, Shaw charged $2.1 million on the credit cards.

Shaw's conduct was discovered after the credit union was audited. What made her actions completely shocking, especially to the board members of the credit union who trusted her entirely, was the fact that Shaw had deep ties to the credit union because it was her grandparents who opened it. She was one of only three employees, and the board had no access to the databases. Shaw was a trusted insider.

After the audit, the credit union reached out to the FBI. Through bank records, agents quickly pieced together what Shaw had done.

Luckily for the credit union members, insurance reimbursed them, so they didn't lose their own money. But the loss to the small Beaver, Pennsylvania, credit union, founded in 1964, was so large, it had to permanently close.

"This credit union no longer exists because of her actions," said Special Agent Samantha Bell, who investigated the case out of the FBI's Pittsburgh Field Office.

Through financial records, investigators learned Shaw used the credit cards to go on trips, eat out at restaurants, buy clothes, and start a pig farm.

"She bought some land and spent a lot of money into outfitting that land for her use," said Bell. "She bought ATVs, four-wheelers, four sheds, pigs. At one point, she had a horse and some really big rabbits. A lot of money went into funding that effort."

There was nothing that the government could recover. "The property is actually worth less than what she bought it for. Nothing that she had left would actually make a profit for the government," said Bell. Bell noted that the credit union may take some of the assets to try to sell for a profit and recoup some of the losses.

Shaw pleaded guilty to embezzlement from a federal credit union and was sentenced in January 2022 to 51 months in prison.

According to Bell, cases like Shaw's are not uncommon, and state and local police departments don't always have enough personnel to tackle these types of investigations. The FBI can often assist with additional investigators and expertise.

"We do see a lot of people stealing, especially employees with access to funds. It's a crime that happens a lot," Bell said.

Horoscopes

a bit confused. Try to be fair to everyone around you, especially yourself.

Aries 3/21-4/19

Too much exposure to books, newspapers, and computers today could produce eyestrain headaches, Aries, so try to exercise a little caution when working with small print or computer text. Thoughts of love and romance could interfere with your ability to do your work effectively. You may be tempted to spend most of your time on the phone. We all have days like this, so don't fight it.

Taurus 4/20-5/20

By nature you're a master psychologist, Taurus and you don't need to know someone well to accurately assess his or her thoughts and motives. Today this ability goes far beyond psychology and borders on the psychic. People's feelings may jump out at you. Reading newspaper headlines gives you uncanny ideas about the future.

Gemini 5/21-6/20

An emotional issue with a family member could have you wanting to run away and hide, Gemini. Don't fight the urge. This may be just what you need in order to clear your mind regarding the problem and heal your wounded psyche before you face this person again.

Cancer 6/21-7/22

Emotional issues rooted in the past could leave you feeling inhibited today, Cancer. You might also be a bit more touchy than usual and see insult where none is intended. Curb the impulse to take offense. Try to confront and release the old issues or at least promise yourself you'll deal with them later.

Leo 7/23-8/22

Friction or other trouble on the job could cause you to want to quit, Leo, but worries about money might keep you from doing it. You definitely need to reassess your situation. Perhaps a change of position is just what you need now. You may have untapped talents that could make you more marketable, and you might also want to train those talents.

Virgo 8/23-9/22

Your self-confidence could well be in the pits today, Virgo. Mistakes from the past could come back to haunt you, and you may be momentarily overcome by the fear that you'll make similar errors again. Force yourself to be objective before you drive yourself crazy. It could cause you some unnecessary problems.

Libra 9/23-10/22

Generally, you tend to be a very physically oriented person, Libra, but today you're more likely to want to look within, perhaps to experiment with your own psychic abilities or study spiritual concepts. You also might find yourself more interested than usual in the arts, particularly that which comes from other cultures.

Scorpio 10/23-11/21

Financial considerations could delay the start of a new project that you've wanted to begin for a long time, Scorpio. Perhaps you don't quite have the funds you need, or maybe the cost is a bit higher than you expected. Don't sink into despair. This is only another temporary delay.

Sagittarius

11/22-12/21

The day may be temporarily plagued by scandal of some sort, Sagittarius. Some of your entourage, particularly women, may gather in conspiratorial gossip. Your curiosity will definitely be aroused, but don't be tempted to join them. There is more to the situation than meets the eye, and you'll want to know all the facts before jumping to conclusions.

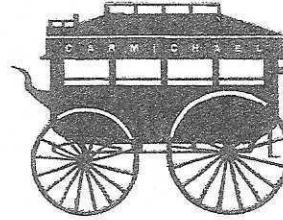

Capricorn 12/22-01/19

You're intuitive by nature, Capricorn, but today you're likely to have a rush of psychic premonitions. Insights into your own character could bring old traumas to the surface so you can release them. Your dreams could be especially vivid and rather disconcerting, although not in a negative way. Write them down. Your aesthetic sense is also very high.

Aquarius 1/20-2/18

Sex and romance are very much on your mind today, Aquarius. You're feeling especially passionate, and your emotions are rich and deep. At times like this you're likely to want to concentrate on your own pleasure, yet it's important to be sensitive to your partner as well. Racy novels and movies could be especially appealing, and you might toy with the idea of shopping at Victoria's Secret.
